Courting Your Career uses dating as a metaphor to demystify the process of finding a great job. ITOCOs a humorous, informative, and helpful book for job seekers, inspired by the authorOCOs work with more than a thousand undergraduate and graduate students at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and Westminster College. He learned that many college students lack critical job search skills and generally do not know how to effectively use traditional career-search resources, from databases to networking. He also found they didnOCOt relate to the majority of career titles already on the market. But when he used dating as a metaphor for the job search, students better understood the process and eventually met with much more success in their searches."

Will give you the competitive edge in understanding exactly what it is that makes you uniquely valuable to employers and how you can get this point across. Working from a marketing viewpoint, it pushes you to take a proactive rather than reactive position. The ``I" Examination shows you how to attract employer interest and sell/promote your career—in short how to stimulate demand for your services. This complete career marketing program takes you through all the steps, from developing qualifications, writing and producing resumes to researching companies, interviewing and negotiating for job offers and even managing your career after you start a new job.

A career is an individual's journey through learning, work and other aspects of life. There are a number of ways to define a career and the term is used in a variety of ways. Career management describes the active and purposeful management of a career by an individual Career Development is the lifelong process of managing learning, work, leisure, and transitions in order to move toward a personally determined and evolving preferred future. In educational development, career development provides a person, often a student, focus for selecting a carrier or subject(s) to undertake in the future. Often educational institutions provide career counselors to assist students with their educational development.
