Suffolk is an East Anglian county of historic origin in England. It has borders with Norfolk to the north, Cambridgeshire to the west and Essex to the south. The North Sea lies to the east. The county town is Ipswich; other important towns include Lowestoft, Bury St Edmunds, Newmarket, and Felixstowe, one of the largest container ports in Europe. The county is low-lying but it has quite a few hills, and has largely arable land with the wetlands of the Broads in the north. The Suffolk Coast and H

The name Debenham has its origins in a Suffolk village, a hamlet on the River Deben about 12 miles north of Ipswich. The name of the river is derived from the Anglo-Saxon for "deep valley", but just where this valley might be is not clear. The village web-site is most informative, and there is also a family history site dedicated to other names associated with the village.

History. The area of the Lark Valley, around Fornham All Saints, was settled in the Neolithic Age (4000BC -2500BC)- probably later, rather than earlier, in this period. The field between Pigeon Lane and the A1101 Mildenhall Road contains the remains of a wooden henge (only visible from aerial photographs), from which a cursus- a ceremonial causeway, probably for religious purposes and almost a mile long- runs parallel to the River Lark.
