Timex Expedition Field Chronograph Review 75% Summary The Expedition Field Chronograph is a good watch, even if the quirks of the watch make it a little clunky to use. If you're picky or particular, the chronograph movement might drive you a little bonkers.

While this is called a “field” watch, the Timex Expedition Chronograph dial also has hints of a pilot’s watch, namely the large skeletonized altimeter hands. The Expedition Field Chronograph hands are dipped in white and easy to see on the black and sand dial.

Like its given name, the Timex Expedition Scout Chrono is fairly substantial thing. Its case features a lug width of 42mm, rising 12mm off the wrist. It's no G-Shock, to be sure, but there's definitely a bit of heft to the package. Still, it wears quite easily.

Timex Expedition Review - Are They Good? - The Watch Blog

The Timex wing of my watch collection is now home to eight watches, with several modern quartz Timex staples – the Weekender, Weekender Chrono, and Expedition Field Chronograph – sitting beside numerous vintage Timex automatics. The collection is a mixture of old and new, and I think showcases the best from one of one of America’s most enduring watch brands.

Timex Expedition Review: The brushed finished metal case made of an alloy Most of what I could find about the watch stated a 'metal case.' A 'stainless steel' case was not explicitly mentioned, so I would assume the case is likely some kind of metal alloy. The case-back does however, claim to be stainless steel.

Timex Expedition Review - is this a worthy field watch ...

Timex's Indiglo backlight is the best in the industry, and like its non-chrono sibling – the Weekender 40 – the Chronograph enjoys exceptional visibility at any time of day or night as a result. It's hard to find fault in such an affordable and well-made piece. I really love that you can get a great watch for well under $75.

The movement is a bit sloppy and the second hand that is used for the chronograph doesn't quite line up at the 12 position. I have tried to adjust it but because of the poor movement, it is always off to the left or to the right of the 12oclock position. A cheaper Seiko solar watch has excellent movement.
